

Dear Soldier of Love,

Reload Love just celebrated our one-year anniversary. Look what you did when you joined the lovement!

We launched with a brass jewelry line of four pieces and since then have expanded with four additional items. Our jewelry caught your attention, generated excitement, and brought awareness to our cause. Sales continue online, through our local partners, and at various venues.

Your generosity has enabled us to send support to the following projects, but we're not done yet. Take a look at the projected needs.

Years of violence and terror continue due to evolving world situations. In this last year alone, 11 million people were uprooted. In Iraq, 4.5 million children have been traumatically affected due to the escalation of armed conflict and the upsurge of violence. It is our mission to rally as many people as possible to join our cause and wield the most powerful weapon of all: our hearts.

INSIDE THE PROJECT

Our second trip to Burma was quite an adventure. One of the most exciting days was hosting the Good Life Club. Over a hundred boys and girls flocked from the bush to participate, and we had a fun-filled day with games, crafts, and teaching them about Jesus through song and drama. The day also included a Run for Relief and a medical clinic. Most of these children do not have access to doctors and hospitals, so Reload Love went to offer care, hope, and love!

ACTS OF LOVE

One afternoon, a newlywed couple walked into the office to make a donation. I soon learned that in lieu of gifts, they requested their guests to join them as soldiers of love on their wedding day by making a monetary gift to Reload Love. This selfless act of love is just one example of how your involvement is bringing hope to children caught in the crossfire of terrorism.

We are the army of love. We dream of a day when children do not fear for their lives. By transforming spent bullet casings into something beautiful, we help heal little ones around the world whose lives have been damaged by the ugliness of terrorism. Join us and arm children with hope.
